Naval Surface Warfare Center Indian Head Division (NSWC IHD) brings together the largest full-spectrum energetics facility in the Department of Defense (DoD) with the largest concentration of explosive ordnance disposal (EOD) technology and resources in the world.

The U.S. Navy, DoD agencies, and allied nations all come to NSWC IHD for energetic systems solutions and EOD expertise. We support the warfighter of today and of tomorrow through discoveries that anticipate the next generation's future needs.

One of ten divisions of the Naval Sea Systems Command Warfare Center Enterprise, NSWC IHD has the largest U.S. workforce in the DoD dedicated to energetics and EOD and is home to more than 2,700 employees, approximately 70 of which hold doctorates.

The main site for NSWC IHD is located at Naval Support Facility Indian Head, a 3,500-acre peninsula along the Potomac River in Southern Maryland. NSWC IHD also has two official detachments and six off-site locations, including sites in Picatinny, New Jersey; McAlester, Oklahoma; Rock Island, Illinois; and Ogden, Utah; and employees stationed throughout the world.
