NUWC Division Newport

is one of the two divisions of the Naval Undersea Warfare Center. Its mission is to support NUWC by providing research, development, test and evaluation, engineering and Fleet support for submarines, autonomous underwater systems, undersea offensive and defensive weapon systems, and countermeasures associated with undersea warfare.

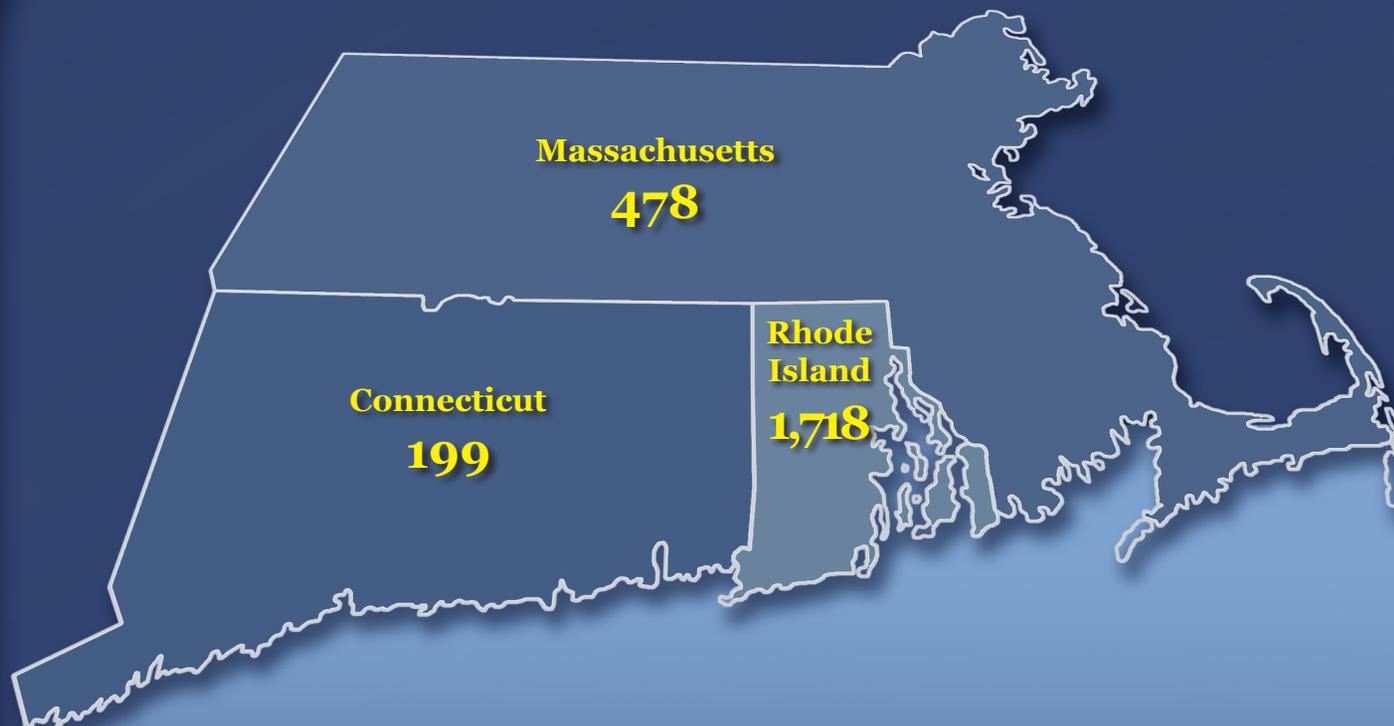

NUWC Division Newport operates detachments at West Palm Beach, Florida, and Andros Island in the Bahamas. Remote test facilities are located at Seneca Lake and Fisher's Island in New York and at Dodge Pond in Connecticut.

The range of NUWC Division Newport's efforts extends from participation in fundamental research to support of evolving operational capabilities in the Fleet, with the major thrust being in applied research and system development.

NUWC Division Newport had a funded program of approximately $933.6 million in 2014. Of a total of $442 million obligated in contracts throughout the year, more than $331 million was awarded to private contractors in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, mostly for engineering services. NUWC Division Newport is a major contributor to the economy of Southern New England, with approximately $380 million distributed in the form of salaries to 2,755 civilian employees and attached military personnel. Of the total contracted work-years executed during fiscal year 2014, approximately 2,384 were performed by companies located in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and Connecticut.
