

RAD Hard Introduction

This section describes the problems that arise and the solutions that can be brought to bear when parts must be selected for a system that is to be used in a radiation environment. The sections cover radiation effects and environments, quality systems, part selection guidance, application practices, the selection process for RHA devices as an element of design, and system guidance.