Vessel History

Deployment Summary	Three weeks after commissioning Portsmouth began her first mission, supporting rescue operations in Grenada. She was awarded the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal for that action. In 1984 Portsmouth entered her homeport of Groton, Connecticut, which she left for her permanent homeport at Ballast Point Submarine Base in San Diego. En route she transited through the Panama Canal and made a quick dash south for her first transit across the equator. Upon completion of a 14 week Post Shakedown Availability in August 1984 she transited the Panama Canal and arrived in her new homeport of San Diego, California on 22 October 1984. Portsmouth has conducted three extended deployments and three mini-deployments to the Western Pacific since 1985. She was awarded two Meritorious Unit Commendations for operations conducted in 1987, 1989 and 1993, the Silver Anchor Award for excellence in retention for 1987, the Engineering Red "E" for 1994, the Supply Blue "E" for 1994 and the Battle Efficiency "E" award for 1988, 1989 and 1994. In 1985 Portsmouth commenced her first Western Pacific operations that included port-calls in Japan and Australia and became the first American nuclear-powered warship to visit Fiji. Years later she became the first to make a liberty call to communist Chinese reunified Hong Kong. In February 1991, Portsmouth entered Mare Island Naval Shipyard in Vallejo, California for a Depot Modernization Period. Upon completion of extensive engineering and weapons systems upgrading, Portsmouth returned to San Diego and commenced operations attached to Commander, Submarine Squadron Three. In 1993 Portsmouth deployed to the Western Pacific with the USS LINCOLN Battle Group. During this time she pioneered new methods of Special Warfare which were put to the test when she conducted an insertion of Army Rangers at night during a Joint Exercise. Portsmouth has been involved in the live firing of exercise torpedoes and missiles and in the testing of the Navy's new Mine Avoidance sonar. In March 1985, Portsmouth transferred to Commander, Submarine Squadron Eleven. USS Portsmouth returned home to San Diego Feb. 11, 2004 following a successful six-month Western Pacific deployment. Upon their return, Portsmouth was awarded the 2003 Commander, Submarine Squadron 11 Tactical White 'T,' Communications Green 'C' and the Damage Control
